

Nathan R. Beane, PhD

Research Forester
Environmental Laboratory
Engineer Research and Development Center
U.S. Army Corps of Engineers

Bio:

Dr. Beane is the leading Research Forester within the U.S. Army Engineer Research and Development Center (ERDC), where he has served since 2011. Working for military and civil works efforts, his research experiences span the continent, from evaluating forest regeneration in the Florida Everglades to developing management frameworks for tundra vegetation above the Arctic Circle. Dr. Beane earned a Forestry degree from the University of Arkansas-Monticello, and obtained his MS and PhD in Forestry and Forest Resource Science from West Virginia University.

Brandon Randig

Natural Resource Specialist
Granger Lake
Fort Worth District
U.S. Army Corps of Engineers

Bio:

Mr. Randig is a Natural Resource Specialist within the Fort Worth District located at Granger Lake. Where he has served since 2006. Mr. Randig works on the local level with adjacent landowners as well as other agencies to develop management practices to reduce the number of feral swine of federal property. Mr. Randig has a degree from Texas A&M University in Wildlife and Fishery Sciences.

(Continued)

Stacy W. Dunkin, M.S. CWB®

District Biologist
Natural Resources Section
Tulsa District
U.S. Army Corps of Engineers

Bio:

Mr. Dunkin is a district biologist within the U.S. Army Corps Engineer, Tulsa District where he has served since 2010. Working in the Operation Division, he is responsible for the management of various District programs involving environmental stewardship, endangered species, fish and wildlife management, wildlife damage control, invasive species, and environmental compliance. Mr. Dunkin is a Certified Wildlife Biologist®. He earned a Wildlife and Fisheries Management degree from Northeastern State University- Tahlequah, Oklahoma, and obtained his MS degree in Natural Resources Ecology and Management from Oklahoma State University- Stillwater, Oklahoma.

Eric Lemons

Natural Resources Specialist
Wappapello Lake
St. Louis District
U.S. Army Corps of Engineers

Bio:

Eric is the Environmental Stewardship Lead Ranger at Wappaello Lake. He has held this position for 10 of his 23 years in the Stewardship program. He manages 44,000 acres of waterways, forest, agricultural lands, wetlands and old fields. Eric has been engaged in feral hog work since 2002 and served in an active role on the Missouri Feral Hog Task Force created through an executive order issued by Governor Matt Blunt and presented at the 2008 National Conference on Feral Hogs.
