Regional Historic Flood of 2011 at Wappapello Lake

Surmounting rains poured into the St. Francis River watershed and caused flood waters to rise at Wappapello Lake. The lake crested on May 3, 2011 at 400.04 National Geodetic Vertical Datum (NGVD) and became the highest lake level recorded in the history of the Wappapello Dam. The last time flood waters topped the overflow spillway was in 1945 when the lake crested at 399.09 NGVD.

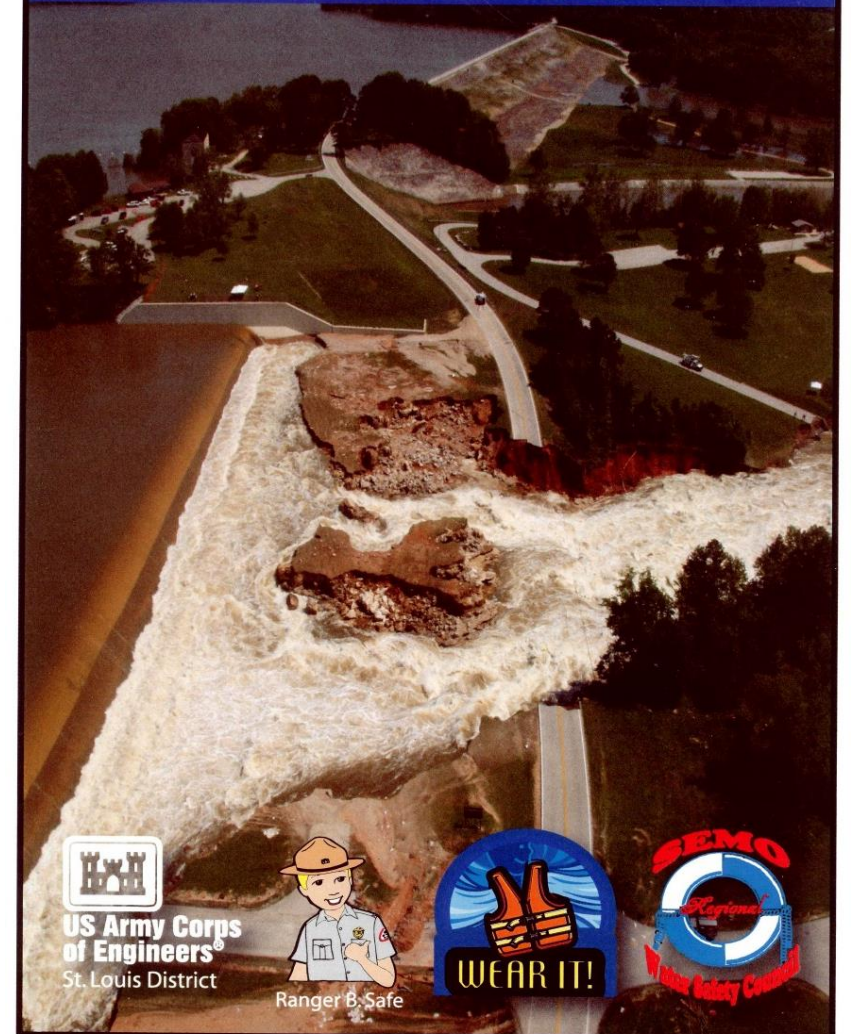

The power of water cannot be underestimated. Play it safe and wear a U.S. Coast Guard approved, properly-fitted life jacket when enjoying water-based recreation. Your life may depend on it. A friendly reminder from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the SEMO Regional Water Safety Council.
